The Tyranny of Success

Successful organizations are dynamically conservative

- They actively try to preserve their core competencies.
- Their resistance to change is rooted in the complexity and interdependence of culture, systems, structures, processes.
- They are held hostage to their past.

The Tyranny of Success

„There is at least one point in the history of any company when you have to change dramatically to rise to the next performance level. Miss the moment and you start to decline.“

Andy Grove
CEO Intel

Three Principles For Impelenting Change

- 1. Change happens in stages.
- 2. Different strategies are more effective in different stages.
- 3. People move through stages at varying speeds.

Major Challenge of the First Step

People don't tell you what you need to know

Major Challenges of the Second Step

- Managers expect that if they give people compelling information on the need for change then change will be accepted.
- Managers fail to realize they are already excited about change and have been actively involved.
- 🔑 It takes longer and requires more involvement for others to understand the need for and value of change - the social relationships are key.

Second Step - Building Interest

What will it do for them?

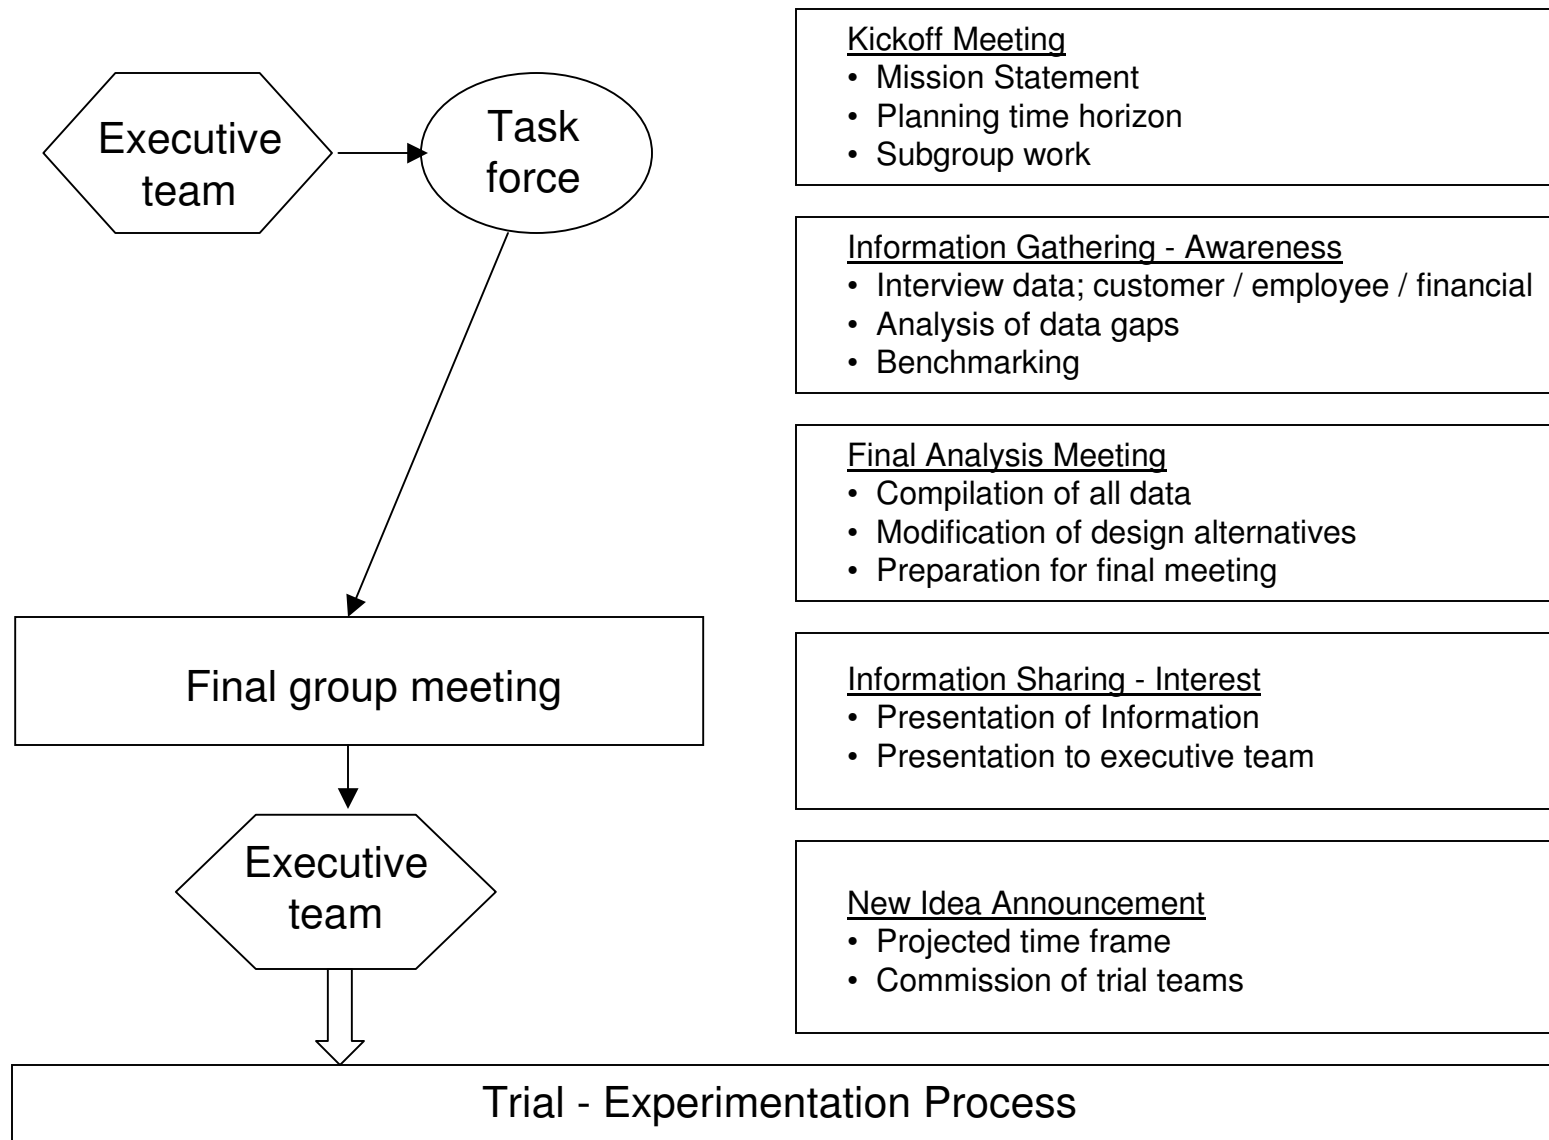

- Recognition Plan
 - by sustaining managers, agents, advocates
 - Incentives & rewards
 - Symbolic actions

- Communication Plan
 - meetings
 - one-to-one
 - groups / teams
 - memos
 - e-mail / letters (home & work)
 - newsletters

An Effective Statement of Change

- Keep it simple. Simple and clearly understood.
- True values are reflected in the change. The change is consistent with the vision and mission and reflects the values of the hotel.
- Action terms. State change in behavioral terms - what is to be done rather than how people should feel.
- Results oriented. Statement describes what the change will bring about (results), rather than describe the process (actions) of changing.
- The changes is specific vs. General - What it is? Who does it affect? When and where will it take place? Why is it occurring?

Change Process

Organizational Change Process

- Identify compelling business reasons for change - Discomfort
- Assess the organization's readiness to move toward the vision - Preparation
- Design a clearly articulated, widely shared vision of the desired state
- Build strong sponsorship and commitment to initiate and sustain change. Idea spreaders
- Construct a communication plan with sticky information
- Develop measures to monitor the change and work on the context
